

PERSONAL HYGIENE IN THE HOSPITAL

Safe hygiene for patients and health professionals

During a patient's stay in hospital, hygiene is one of the most basic and important tasks that the nursing team performs. The provision of adequate patient hygiene is essential, not just at a medical level, but also in terms of patient well-being and comfort in order to offer patients the most dignified experience possible.

PERSONAL HYGIENE AT HOME AND WHEN TRAVELLING

Personal hygiene at home and when travelling

Soapy sponges have nowadays become a daily product to be used not just in healthcare centres but for your entire family at home as well.

As occurs in hospitals, the dampness that conventional bath sponges retain, along with high temperatures, are clear risk factors for the proliferation of bacteria.

The choice of single-use products such as Layertex soapy sponges avoids the risk of infection between people in the same family.

Furthermore, controlling the consumption of soap in each wash in this way offers substantial financial savings.

These soapy sponges and mittens are also truly effective when you are travelling and often lack all the comforts you might desire.
